This Thanksgiving, we give thanks for the opportunity to reduce global poverty and undernutrition by spurring growth in the agriculture sector.

So far, we have helped nearly two million farmers improve practices to boost crop yields. We have also reached almost 9 million children through nutrition programs, which can help improve child survival.

We look forward to continuing this progress through Feed the Future, because helping the world's poor and hungry is more than just the smart thing to do; it's the right thing to do.
